

Violence is obsence. Data confirms that children, who now watch numbing hours of television due to working or otherwise non-present/involved parents, can be negatively effected. Why are we doing this? Isn't the steady diet of war enough? What happened to the "it takes a village..." concept? And if we DO still believe that adage, what does the level of violence allowed on network television say about us?